FROM the PASTOR: Mark Tiessen-Dyck

At our last several Church Council meetings we have discussed the possibility of our church acknowledging the land on which we live and the Indigenous people who called this land home prior to Europeans settling here. This discussion seems more pertinent since the discovery of children’s remains at the Kamloops Residential School. My sadness at this discovery leads me into a deeper reckoning with injustices of the past. While land acknowledgments have become commonplace, I’ve thought a great deal about what it means specifically for a church to do this. What does a Treaty or Land acknowledgement mean for a follower of Jesus? These conversations and wonderings have led me to write my personal land acknowledgement. Like reconciliation, like our lives, this land acknowledgement is a work in progress.

The land on which I live, work, play, and worship is a generous gift from God my Creator. A gift not for me alone. I acknowledge that Indigenous peoples stewarded this land and called it home before I was born and before my ancestors arrived here. I will abide with gratitude to the people who, through Treaty 1, have granted me the honour of living here. When I breathe the air, run on the paths, eat the fruits of the soil, and encounter beauty in this place, I will relinquish an attitude of entitlement and be humble before God as a guest in this place. With Jesus as my guide, I will respect Treaty 1, honour the land, seek reconciliation for the injustices of the past and present, and live toward a future of shalom.
