From the Pastor: Josh Janzen

As we enter into the new year, many of us will have the conversations with ourselves on what our resolutions will be. You know, lose 10 pounds, save $8,000 for that post-pandemic trip to Europe, and so on. However, one thing I've started to notice is people ditching New year's resolutions in favor of New year's intentions. Essentially, setting intentions for the new year comes down to working to cultivate new habits and practices that help us live better and achieve our desires.

Theologian James K.A. Smith tells us that "we are what we love". Each and everyone of us is oriented to some end, some vision of the good life, whatever that may be, and we desire it; we want it. So, it's our hearts and our longings that shape us. Love as our most fundamental orientation in the world, shapes us on an unconscious level, guides our actions and forms our habits, all in service of what our view of the ultimate good life is. What's more is that all of this is tied up with discipleship and spiritual formation. Those New year's resolutions or New year's intentions that we set for ourselves matter in the life of our church. So, what are desires and longings as ABC? By what and how will we be formed? In the face of another year of uncertainty, what will we set as our intentions in 2022?
